

PREDEPARTURE ORIENTATION FOR VIETNAMESE DEPARTING STUDENTS

Panel Discussion for Undergraduate Study

Phoebe Tran (Moderator)

Phuong Tran (Phoebe Tran) is a well-known host, reporter, and story editor for news, features, and talk shows in culture, education, travel. Phoebe majored in Biochemistry and Molecular Biology, alongside Economics and Japanese Literature Studies. Currently, she is involved in developing Vietnamese education, and bringing equal opportunities to all youth.

Tin Pham

Tin Pham just graduated magna cum laude from Case Western Reserve University (CWRU) in Ohio with a B.S.E. in Chemical Engineering and a minor in German. During his undergraduate years, he conducted several research projects in the fields of electrochemistry and biochemistry. Tin was a part of the CWRU Vietnamese Student Association, the Executive Board for Orientation and First-Year Experience & Family Programs, the Undergraduate Admissions Interviewer Team for prospective students, and participated in Greek life on campus. In September, Tin will start his PhD program in Chemistry at Tufts University in Massachusetts.

Chau Ha

Chau earned a bachelor's degree in economics at Middlebury University in Vermont. While studying at Middlebury, Chau worked as a tutor at the Writing Center to assist international students with academic essay writings. After graduation, Chau came back to Danang and started her own business. Chau would like to bring more educational opportunities to her hometown by opening an English center.

Phu Tran

Phu graduated from Cascadia College in December 2019, majoring in Business. While studying at Cascadia, Phu received three scholarships for academic merit, leadership, and community service. Additionally, Phu participated in many activities and had a role of on-campus event coordinator, orientation leader, graphic designer, and was a part of the media team at TEDxYouth event of TEDTalk in Seattle. Phu was employed by Cacadia College to be a marketing assistant for the international programs office under the OPT program. In addition, Phu is a marketing coordinator at Tokita Bethune, an event management company in Seattle. Phu will continue to pursue his bachelor's degree at Georgia State University in 2021.